

Pilot Agreement

Between The Burg (201 Towne Center West Blvd, Henrico, VA) and Sailz, operated by Jayraj ("Provider")

1. The pilot

Provider will operate an AI phone order line for The Burg ("the Service"), as demonstrated on _____ (demo date). The pilot runs free of charge for 15 days, starting _____.

2. What the Service does

Answers inbound calls on a dedicated line, takes pickup orders, reads every order back for confirmation before placing it, sends kitchen tickets, and logs orders, recordings, and daily totals in a dashboard The Burg can access. The AI identifies itself as an AI when asked. No payments are ever taken over the phone.

3. Pricing after the pilot

If The Burg is happy at the end of 15 days and confirms in writing, service continues at a one-time setup fee of $500 and $500 per month, cancel any month. Billing begins only after written confirmation and Provider's first invoice — the pilot itself creates no obligation to pay anything.

4. Control

The Burg's existing number stays untouched; the Service receives calls only while The Burg's own call-forwarding is on, which The Burg can disable at any time from its own phone. Either side may end the pilot at any time, no strings.

5. The Burg's part

Provide and keep current the menu and prices, designate a phone/email for kitchen tickets, and set up call forwarding when ready to go live.

6. Data

Call recordings, transcripts, orders, and customer contact data belong to The Burg. Provider stores them securely to run the Service and deletes them on request if the pilot doesn't convert. Provider may reference The Burg's name or aggregate results publicly only with written OK.

7. Honesty clause

The Service is new. It may occasionally mishandle a complex request; it confirms every order back, and when it fails it collects a name and number for a human callback instead of pretending success. Provider reviews recordings and improves the Service throughout the pilot.

8. As-is

The pilot is provided as-is and free; neither party owes the other anything if it ends. Nothing here transfers ownership of either party's software, brand, recipes, or data except as stated in section 6.
